Roberts was born in 1903 in Charlotte. She was a beautiful and intelligent young woman, and she had a promising future ahead of her. In 1924, she married a man named Frank Roberts, and the couple had two children together. The Roberts family lived in a small house in the Dilworth neighborhood of Charlotte.

On the night of December 11, 1930, Nancy Roberts was home alone with her children. Her husband was out of town on business. At around 10:00 pm, Roberts heard a noise coming from the front door. She went to investigate, and she found a man standing on the porch. The man asked Roberts for some water, and she invited him inside.

The man drank the water and then he attacked Roberts. He beat her and strangled her, and he then fled the scene. Roberts' children were asleep in their beds during the attack, and they did not wake up until the next morning.

Roberts' murder was a brutal and senseless crime. The police investigated the case, but they were never able to identify the killer. The case remains unsolved to this day.

In the years after her death, Roberts' ghost is said to have haunted the house where she was murdered. Many people have reported seeing her apparition, and some people have even reported hearing her voice. Roberts' ghost is said to be a gentle and harmless spirit, and she is often seen watching over her children.

The story of Nancy Roberts is a tragic one, but it is also a reminder that even in death, the human spirit can live on. Roberts' ghost is a testament to the power of love and the indomitable spirit of the human soul.
