With Mobile Book Paris, Abrantes invites readers to become active participants in the storytelling process. Through an interactive app, users can scan the city's landmarks, revealing hidden texts, poems, and geolocated narratives that bring to life the literary heritage of Paris. The app seamlessly integrates with the physical environment, enabling users to interact with virtual literary landmarks. For instance, scanning the Eiffel Tower summons a poem by Guillaume Apollinaire, conjuring the shimmering lights of the city beneath the tower's majestic silhouette. Similarly, reading Jean-Paul Sartre's words at the Café de Flore transports users to the heart of bohemian Paris, where literary giants gathered to exchange ideas and inspire generations.

Mobile Book Paris offers a captivating blend of literary genres, ranging from poetry and prose to historical accounts and personal anecdotes. Each story reveals a unique perspective on Paris, inviting readers to delve into the city's multifaceted identity and its enduring literary legacy. The app also features original works by contemporary authors, adding a fresh voice to the chorus of literary giants that have celebrated Paris throughout history.

Celebrating the Book Arts

Beyond its immersive storytelling experience, Mobile Book Paris pays homage to the traditional art of bookbinding. Abrantes designed a physical book to accompany the app, featuring exquisite craftsmanship and incorporating elements of AR technology. This tangible artifact serves as a reminder of the enduring value of the printed word, while simultaneously embracing the transformative power of digital innovation.
